Assignment Brief

One Practical Assignment

Your team is assigned to deliver a simple awareness activity in one week. Create one written team action plan that explains how the team will work together, who will do what, and how you will keep everyone aligned.

- Write the team goal and the expected final deliverable in one or two sentences.
- Assign roles for at least four team members and explain each role briefly.
- Write five teamwork rules covering communication, deadlines, feedback, decision-making, and accountability.
- Choose two leadership behaviors you would use to support the team and explain why.

Required Written Submission

Final Output	- Team goal and deliverable statement. - Simple role distribution table. - Five teamwork rules or norms. - Short leadership reflection: 100-150 words.
---------------------	---

Evaluation Rubric - 20 Marks

Criteria	Marks	What the trainer will check
Goal and deliverable clarity	5	Goal and deliverable are specific, realistic, and easy to understand.
Role distribution	5	Roles are relevant, balanced, and connected to the project needs.
Teamwork rules	5	Rules support collaboration, trust, accountability, and smooth communication.
Leadership reflection and presentation	5	Leadership behaviors are practical, well explained, and the submission is professionally formatted.

Submission note: The assignment must be completed in writing only. Do not submit voice notes, videos, or presentation recordings.

Part 1: Team Goal and Deliverable Deliver raise awareness on mental health on campus in 1 week. The expected final deliverable is a powerpoint presentation, alongside a printed poster, presented to at least one class or student group by the end.

Part 2: Role Distribution

Role	Assigned To	Responsibility
Team Lead	Waleed	Coordinates the overall plan, sets the schedule, and makes final calls when the team can't agree.
Content Creator	Hany	Researches the awareness topic and writes the core messaging and materials.
Design & Materials	Mazen	Builds the visual assets (poster, slides, or social graphics) for the activity.
Logistics & Outreach	Tantawy	Books the space/time slot, arranges equipment, and invites the audience.

Part 3: Teamwork Rules

- Communication: Make daily progress updates regularly. No major decision should be taken with the consultation of others, and clear communication is encouraged.
- Deadlines: Every task has an owner and an agreed date from the start, and if someone is blocked they flag it at least twenty four hours before the deadline instead of after, because meeting deadlines is one of the basic norms that keeps collaboration reliable.
- Feedback: Should be respectful, specific, direct, and given as early as possible, and whoever receives it listens openly instead of getting defensive, following the give and receive feedback system.
- Decision-making: Small day to day decisions are made by whoever owns that task, while decisions that affect the whole team are discussed together, which balances individual responsibility with shared responsibility.
- Accountability: Each member reports their task status consistently, takes responsibility for their own tasks, and owns any mistakes instead of hiding them, since accountability means being reliable and completing work on time.

Part 4: Leadership Reflection As team lead, I would rely on two leadership behaviors: clear delegation and active listening. Delegation means assigning tasks based on what each member is good at and confirming they understand what is expected, which prevents overlap and confusion under a tight one week deadline. Active listening means checking in with each member individually rather than only through group updates, so a quiet concern or a blocker surfaces early instead of becoming a last minute problem.

Together these two behaviors keep the team aligned without me having to control every detail, they build the kind of psychological safety where people feel comfortable admitting mistakes or asking questions, and they support the trust that strong teamwork depends on. I believe this combination is more effective than a purely traditional, centralized style, because it keeps the team engaged while I still take responsibility for the final direction and decisions.
